

Pushing Wheels of Work:
Women's Livelihood Recovery after tsunami in Coastal India by DMI

The panchayat president launching the programme on an auspicious occasion.	Designs and layouts are a must. The women have a clear idea about what they want to work on. A plan is being made.	The women meet under the temporary workshed set up by the panchayat to decide who will produce what and for how long.

The members of women's committee making the first stock of coir rope.	Pushing wheels is hard and exhausting, but not impossible.	Three women, each hour, wind six kilos of coconut husk.

The final product is locally bought to build and repair temporary shelters.	And who will keep the wage-list? Regular public payments are made.	Panchayat leaders giving guidance on other coastal resources.

© DMI, 2005. March 20, 2005.